For example, if the feeling shown on the dice was 'excited', a student who likes sports might write the adjective in the following sentence: I feel excited when I watch sports. In this adjectives of feeling game, students play bingo by making true sentences about how they feel in certain situations. In this fun adjectives of feeling and emotion game, students play battleships using family vocabulary and adjectives of feeling and emotion. I read out sentence by sentence. The activity was a success! I am sure other children will enjoy doing it as well. The first student to get four squares in a row wins and shouts 'bingo'. If it is a miss, their partner replies 'no', e.g. 'No, she isn't'. I would pause after a few seconds to give them time to think of a sentence. The second student then takes over and tries to sink the ship. The third student continues until all three have had a turn. The fourth student starts again. I read out the sentence and the student marks the square with an 'X' for hit or an 'O' for miss. The first student to sink all their partner's ships wins the game. You can find more information and change your preferences herePage 2 The page you are currently viewing is part of a larger worksheet titled Adjectives of Emotion. This free downloadable worksheet on the topic of Adjectives of Emotion includes a number of activities designed to help students learn and practice using adjectives related to emotions. The worksheet also includes a section on communicative tasks to practise adjectives. It will also introduce your B1/B2 students to new adjectives. There is also a strong pronunciation focus, where students work out the word stress of the adjectives with their partners and practise pronouncing each one in follow-up tasks. Download here!
